Case Study: Multinational Launches Global Investigation

The Issue

A large, multinational corporation with significant United Kingdom presence was being investigated by the United States government for potential violations of the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act.

Our Approach

Under deadline, Consilio helped identify custodians and communications spanning 9 countries and written in more than 24 languages -- including Mandarin, Russian and Ukrainian. Navigating each country's data protection laws, Consilio constructed three data centres, translated, then encrypted data to ensure compliance of data privacy, security and "need-to-know" requirements.

The Result

Although the corporation admitted fault, its associated fines was mitigated by 40% due to what the U.S. Department of Justice cited as their extensive efforts in preserving and making available documents from foreign countries -- a savings of hundreds of millions of dollars.
